November 2018

October has been a fun month of fall and insects. The children really seemed to like getting a hands-on look at pumpkins, nature, and the bugs found outside. We really got our hands dirty this month with all our projects and experiments. Moving to November, I want to have the children create more artwork and really explore the world of colors within the classroom. I love watching them learn through their creativity, so it should be a fun month!

The month of November is a time to focus on things that we are thankful for and about the important things in our lives. So, I thought that it would be fun to learn about all of the things that make us, Us. Our classroom themes for the month of November will be "All About Me" and "My Family". I want the children to really focus on the different traits that they have and to celebrate how unique they are without comparing themselves to others. We will have special days that will be centered on their favorite things. Our family unit will look at different family dynamics and what each of our families are comprised of. The children will learn the letters in their names and how to write them, we will work on our addresses, and have some fun sharing our favorite things. I think this unit will really help me, as well as the other students, get to know everyone even better!

The fall leaves have changed, and the weather is getting increasingly colder, and that means winter is coming! To keep your children nice and warm during the cold weather, make sure they have warm jackets, hats, gloves, and warm clothes to keep in the classroom. We all still want to have fun outside, but I definitely want to keep them all warm and cozy in the frigid weather.
